Code of Conduct for Arts BC Members

The Code of Conduct does not replace or change Arts BC's policies, practices or collective agreements. The Code gives an overview of the key practices and behaviours that define the standards of acceptable conduct to which we hold ourselves accountable as a community.

The activities outlined below are strictly prohibited. The board shall have the authority to expel any Arts BC member, in its sole absolute discretion for any violation of this Code, on any one or more of the following grounds:

- Racism, misogyny, sexism, ableism, classism, cultural appropriation, homophobia, transphobia, microaggressions and all other forms of discrimination and oppression, spoken, written, printed, or worn. This includes but is not limited to: failure to be inclusive, cooperate or treat others equally with respect and fairness regardless of one's status; addressing individuals in a diminutive, derogative, or malicious way based on their gender, race, ability, language, class, religion, sexual orientation or gender identity;
- Abusive language, discourtesy or rudeness towards any individual who conducts work on Arts BC's behalf, including board members, contractors, volunteers or other team members;
- Verbal, physical or visual harassment of another individual;
- Bullying or taking unfair advantage of any individual;
- Actual or threatened violence toward any individual or group;

All members of the Arts BC community are asked to communicate any complaints, problems or breaches of this Code of Conduct to: ehearte@artsbc.org or president@artsbc.org

By checking this box, I have read and I understand the Arts BC's Code of Conduct. I agree to abide by the rules described above and understand that I may be removed as a member if I violate any of these rules.
